On October 27 we remind ourselves why individuals and community organizations need to step in and help vulnerable children and youth

On Dress Purple Day, [name of organization] will speak up for every child and youth's right to safety and well-being in all spaces. Adults need to step in and help kids who are dealing with neglect, physical and sexual abuse, gender-based violence, dating violence, and emotional abuse, including racism, intolerance, prejudice, and discrimination. This right applies everywhere – at home and in the community. Learn more about how you can support the campaign at www.oacas.org/dresspurpleday/.

Dress Purple Day and answering the call for help

On Dress Purple Day, Children's Aid Societies partner with local community partners and stakeholders to raise awareness about the important role adults and community organizations play in supporting vulnerable children, youth, and families. Read and share Tom's story about the difficulties he faced getting help, and how a friend and guidance counsellor finally stepped in and helped transform his life: www.oacas.org/calling-for-help/
